What Students Showed Us

Cell Phones and Smartphones

"If I don't have my phone, I feel kind of out of place, because I can't call anybody, I can't communicate with anyone."

"I think I left my phone home one time and I felt so naked. I felt like I didn't know what was going on in the world. I didn't know what time it was. ... I didn't think I could function without my phone."

"I can check e-mail faster on the go, calendars, Internet, GPS if I get lost somewhere and I'm going around, I don't know I just use it for a lot of stuff. ... It would make life pretty inconvenient to not have it."

Laptops

"No, no. It's too big, too heavy. With commuting and everything, I can't bring it."

"Mmmm....
Maybe once a week. Because it's heavy. Plus my books. It's heavy. It kills my back. Because I'm in school from 11:00 until 8:30."

"I'd just rather keep it at home so nothing would happen to it. No water spill, no damage."

"I brought it once and I forgot to charge it [laughs]. I brought it all the way from home and it doesn't do shit with no battery."

Other Mobile Academic Tech

"The Blackberry keeps me organized. ... it's like basically a handheld organization device." "Sometimes I type papers on my cell phone. And then I upload it. I send it to myself as an email. Then I'll upload it once I get to school."

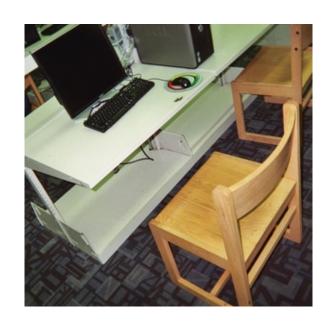

"Just plug the PDF to research and read it really fast. And I make notes... make annotations on it. And then I just export that out and stuff."

Access Issues

"Well I usually go [to the public library] after school because the internet I think is more better because the internet in the school, like some areas are restricted and most of the time I just want to go on for fun since I don't have a computer or internet in my home."

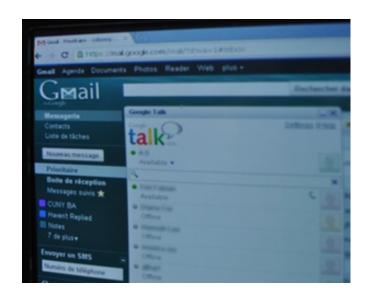

"So, basically finding a printer is the biggest problem [...] finding a printer and making sure my work is done before my class. That's really frustrating."

No Mobile Tech...By Choice

"So, my friends get in contact with me through Gmail. Either GoogleTalk or GChat. So, I can send text messages through Gmail, or I can go on AIM from Gmail and talk to them there. So, if they need me, they know how to get in contact with me."

"I actually prefer email over phone because I don't have a cell phone and if somebody wants to get in touch with me immediately, you know, my phone is at my house, I'm out a lot of the time but I can usually get to a computer and check my email."
